Recognizing Mental Health Awareness Month

This May, we recognize that living with a serious mental illness can be challenging, but no one has to face it alone.

At the Homeless and Housing Resource Center, we share best practices for staff supporting people with mental illness. Recent releases have provided tips for nonclinical staff working in encampments, described how serious mental illness can impact behavior in housing, and provided guidance for connecting tenants with mental health support.

SAMHSA's 2025 Mental Health Awareness Month Toolkit provides materials for spreading awareness of best practices for supportive and beneficial discussions about mental health and encouraging acceptance of people living with a mental illness.
